and gave the first alarm. The quick response of the Fire Department and the effective work of the firemen served to get the fiames under way before much damage was done.

The roof of the low, one-story, brick building, which has three cellars under it, was ablesse and for a time it was thought that the whole building would go. A dozen streams of water played on the fiames from different points, and within an hour the fire was out.

The damage is estimated at $5,000, mostly done to machinery in the bottling department, and to the building. A number of cases of champagne were broken by the heat, but the employes succeeded in getting most of the bottles out in time.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 26.-Jim Streeter, a negro, was killed to-day by a trap gun in the store of R. F. Lacey & Son, at Powderly, a suburs.

The store has been burglarized repeatedly during the last few months. Eight weeks ago a bear trao was set in the place, and Oilie Gray, a negro, was caught in it and is now in jail. However, the depredations continued, and the firm resorted to the trap gun. Before Streater died he confessed that he had a companion, who escaped.

Industrial Resumptions Numerous, Though Labor Situation Is Still Complex.

New York, Aug. 28.-Bradstreet's to-morrow will say: Rather better Western crop reports and the advance of the fall season have brought an in-creased number of buyers to nearly all Western and Eastern markets. This has resulted in an enlargement of fall distributions, which, however, has proceeded along conservative lines, with staple products notably in most demand A feature of the week throughout the country has been clearance sales of summer goods by retailers, which enlarged distribution in this line, no doubt to be reflected later on collections.

Industrial resumptions are numerous and th aggregate number of operatives involved is considerable. The labor situation is still rather complex, a large number of additional build-ing hands striking at New York and small disturbances being generally widely scattered. Against this, however, is to be cited the prac-tical disappearance from some sections of the

Question as to the Fidelity of Candidates, He Avers, Is WILLING TO BEAR CRITICISM.

Senator Now Thinks It Matters Not Whether Folk Wanted Cook-Crow-Allen Alliance Before Convention.

Jefferson City, Mo., Aug. 28.—Senator time for a week. Much mail, the greater part of which related to the Folk controversy, awaited him. Mr. Folk said Thursday that he considered the incident closed, and Senator Stone concurs in that view. He said:

"I am a strict party man, and I believe that when a man has been nominated on a party ticket and accepts that nomina tion, he is in honor bound not only to support the ticket, actively and openly, but not to allow any doubt to prevail as to his loyalty, for doubt on that subject destroys confidence and prevents harmonious and united party action, We were confronted in this State with a condition that could not continue without utter de country were calling the fidelity of our candidates in question, and everywhere there was discussion of the subject, with growing doubt and suspic.on.

"I wanted that stopped, and I knew it had to be stopped or the devil would be to pay. There was but one way to stop it, and that was for the candidates to speak right out for the ticket, and thus silence all doubt as to their positions and that any Democrat should hesitate to do that, That was all, absolutely all, I asked the cand dates to do at St. Louis. Some think I was more insistent than I should have been, but all will agree that I was right in the thing I wanted done, If it ad been done then, as it has been done tince, there would have been no friction or controversy. Controversies are siways regrettable, but sometimes unavoidable, and sometimes result in good. This round-up with Folk has had a good effect. IS NOW DATIBETED.

"In answering me he said it was an insult to suppose that he would not suppor the other candidates nominated by the same convention, and that all the leaders would give the tleket their hearty support. That s the kind of speech I wanted Mr. Folk and the other candilates to make at the Shate Committee meeting in St. Louis. When men hesitated, protested and held back in doing what I thought, indeed knew, to be a plain party duty, and necessary to party success, I spuce right out and said what I thought the occasion demanded. Missouri Democrats know from long experience that I am in the habit of doing that sort of thing, although sometimes I set pounded like Hali Columbia for doing it.

"Now we are all right. Caviling and the other candidates nominated by the sometimes I get pounded like Hali Columbia for doing it.

Now we are all right. Caviling and doubt will cease. We can close the ranks, confident of our leaders, who are now in accord, speaking right out as they should speak, and working together as they should work, and henceforth we can present a united front to the enemy. To have been instrumental in bringing this about, I am willing to bear the criticisms with which a few thoughtless people have assailed me. Now, I call upon all loyal Democrats, the old guard, the stalwarts who never falter, to rally round the flag.

"Let us get our shoulders together like veterans and fight as one man for old Missouri, with our faces to the foe. Now that doubt and suspicion have been scattered to the winds and obstacles to united and harmonious party action have been removed, I am ready for the fray. I need hardly promise Missouri Democrats that I will do my full share of the fighting."

Concerning the Folk-Cook-Crow-Allen alliance, which it is said Mr. Folk desired, Benator Stone said: alliance, which it is said Mr. Folk dealted, Senator Stone said:
"Upon that subject I have nothing to add. I do not care whether Folk wanted an alliance or did not want it. I never considered that of any importance, except as showing that there was no substantial reason why Mr. Folk should not give the ticket his unqualified indorsement. As he prefers to leave the matter where it is. I am sure I have no objection. I repeat it is now of no further consequence whether he wanted an alliance or did not want it."
